Chugach members elect directors

Alex Gimarc and P. J. Hill were elected to 3-year terms on the Chugach Board of Directors. Election results were announced at the annual meeting April 26. About 23 percent of the 64,348 Chugach members of record voted in the election, up from 22 percent in 2006.

Hill is an associate professor of economics and a commercial fisherman. He has been a Chugach member off and on for 30 years.

Gimarc is a systems analyst for the Municipality of Anchorage, and has been a member of Chugach for 14 years.

In other voting, Chugach members passed a bylaw proposal to standardize the dates for appointing member committees and submitting bylaw proposals. A second bylaw proposal passed that allows the board to hire consultants, as needed, in addition to its CEO and financial advisor.

As a cooperative, Chugach is governed by a 7-member board elected by and from its membership. Directors are elected to 3-year, staggered terms.

A total of 239 Chugach members registered for the annual meeting at the Egan Civic & Convention Center. An estimated 350 people attended the meeting.

Chugach board approves generation agreement

On April 25, one day before the annual meeting, elections, and swearing in of two new directors, the board of directors approved a 4-year labor contract with one of its bargaining groups for employees that work at power plants and in certain other jobs. Five directors voted for approval of the contract (Davison, Christopherson, Cottrell, Lipscomb, Nordlund) and two directors voted against approval (Kalenska, Vazquez).

Union employees had voted to approve the new contract on April 13.

The "Generation Plant Personnel Agreement" the board approved covers approximately 80 regular employees who work in a variety of technical jobs in areas like power generation, power control, communications and information technology.

The contract is one of three the utility has with workers represented by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 1547. All three expired July 1, 2006, but both the union and Chugach continued to honor the prior contracts while negotiations have been underway on new agreements. Chugach and the union approved a new 4-year "Outside Agreement" for journey-men linemen and certain other employees in December 2006. Negotiations are ongoing for employees covered by the "Office and Engineering Agreement."

During the 4-year term of the contract employees will receive wage increases of 6 percent in the first year, 5 percent in the second and third years and a CPI (consumer price index) increase in the fourth year. They will also receive a 30 percent pension increase from $5 to $6.50 per hour.

As with the contract approved in December, Chugach management has stated that there will be no immediate change to rates to pay for the increases in this contract. It does not expect to file with the Regulatory Commission of Alaska to add the costs of these contracts in rates in the near future, nor to try to amend a rate case currently at the commission. Initially, any additional costs from the new labor agreements will be seen as reductions to margins that would reduce future capital credits payments to members.

Last September Chugach filed paperwork asking the RCA to set rates that fairly recover the cost of both the generation & transmission and the distribution functions of the utility. If Chugach is successful, that will lead to about a 3 percent overall decrease in retail rates. Hearings on the rate case are expected to begin in August.

811 is national "Call Before You Dig" phone number

The national "Call Before You Dig" number for excavators and homeowners is 811. In an effort to save lives and protect underground utility lines, the Federal Communications Commission wants to eliminate the confusion of multiple "Call Before You Dig" numbers across the country.

Effective May 1, one phone call to 811 will quickly and easily begin the process of getting underground utility lines marked. The 811 call process is efficient, and callers will be routed to their local one call center who will arrange to mark all underground utility lines for free.
